US Web Design System homepage: <https://designsystem.digital.gov/>

Example sites that use the USWDS:

<https://findtreatment.gov/>, <https://pra.digital.gov/> — sites built recently by 18F. These are less complex than DTMO but are good to look at for examples of how you can customize the global and side nav bars.

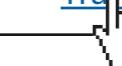

<https://www.move.mil/>, <https://www.performance.gov/> — these sites are more content-heavy examples of USWDS implementation.

Constructed travel is when you'd prefer to use a different mode of transportation from what your Authorizing Official (AO) has authorized you to use. For example, your AO authorized you to use commercial air, but you'd prefer to drive your own car instead.

Breadcrumb: show everything from Level 4, onward.

We don't need a full breadcrumb at the top – rather, we just need everything from the last link in the sidebar (Level 4) onward. More than that gets confusing (see below).

You may need to fill out a Constructed Travel Worksheet first

You'll need to fill out a Constructed Travel Worksheet (CTW) in the Defense Travel System (DTS) only if you plan to drive your personal vehicle 400 miles or more for a one-way trip. If you're driving under 400 miles, you don't need to fill out the CTW.

- A second unordered list item. This one is pretty long, so it goes over one line and on to the next line.
- A third unordered list item.

Temporary Duty \(TDY\) Travel 101 > Booking travel > Transportation > Constructed travel

Booking travel > Transportation > Constructed travel

Other breadcrumb explorations

Left here as examples. With all categories shown, the breadcrumb becomes long and unwieldy, and is duplicative to the path shown in the sidebar, which is clear as to the categories the page falls in.

Since you've started traveling, you should contact your Travel Management Company, [Name-Goes-Here]. For your reference, this information is also included on your travel itinerary.

During working hours, [XX:XXam-XX:XXpm TIMEZONE], [DAY to DAY], call:

(XXX) XXX-XXXX

Afterhours, [XX:XXam-XX:XXpm TIMEZONE], [DAY to DAY], call:

(XXX) XXX-XXXX

There is no existing USWDS style for a kind of "highlighted info" style like the phone numbers in that box, but I want to make one. (I'm thinking it'll look like the above, Public Sans, larger size, semi-bold, but in a dark blue)

Afterhours phone numbers (but not Afterhours timings!) are here:
